Iceland is a year-round destination, but the winter months bring their own sort of magic!

Iceland's Northern Lights season from late August to mid-April is not only the best time to hunt for sightings of this jaw-dropping, natural phenomenon, it is also an ideal time to soak in the warm, soothing waters of the Blue Lagoon, made even more marvelous when it's snowing outside! This, plus the festivals, cultural events, and lively nightlife of Reykjavík, give you all the ingredients for a fantastic getaway!
